The Brownsville Ranche o of the 4th inst. contains the proceedings of the court-martial trial of MAXIMILIAN and his Generals. The Court was composed of Lieutenant-Colonel MANUEL ASPIREZ as President, six Captains, and a Judge-Advocate. The prisoners were tried separately, each ples containing the denial of the jurisdiction of the Court, protesting against the refusal of the appeal. MAXIMILIAN was confined in bed when his case was called, his trial being last; he was ably defended. Senor EULALIO ORTEGA, in refuting the charges of usurper and cruelty, said that the law of 3d October was made when Maxi-MILIAN was cheated into the belief that JUAREZ had abandoned the territory, and that this law had been dictated by the French Commander-in-Chief. He said moreover that this law had been only intended as a terror, for no petition had ever been presented which was not conceeded. The Council earnestly asked the members of the court in the name of civilization, and the history which will judge of the terrible deeds done this day, as the nders of the second independence of Mexico, to save the good name of the country, for in the eyes of coming generations they will forever appland the crowning of the greatest victories by the greatest pardons.

Among the accusations against MAXIMILIAN is death in coming battles.

JESUS MARIA VASQUEZ, MAXIMILIAN'S COURSE closed the argument as follows: "If you condemn the Arch Duke to death, I am not uneasy about a coslition in Europe, or the threatening attitude of the United States against the Republic. ON THE WING.

Finding that our old friend Fahrenheit had got to "feyer heat," we took the alarm a few days ago; thewise took our value, and passage on the Northeastern Railroad, in a desperate effort to find in the vast wilderness some cool lodge. We were surprised, on arriving at Chapel street, to see the large, commodious, and very handsome new depots that have been recently constructed by the Northeastern Railroad Company. From the number of fellow-travellers, we concluded that others, as well as ourselves, had been stewed in our good old city, and were making for a more northern clime. Atthough it was hot on the cars, the open air of the country was a relief, and our eyes feasted on the varied and ever changing verdure that invested field and forest, swamp, mead and grove. The rich foliage of the maple, gum and poplar; the sombre coloring of the pine, cypress and live oak; the tropical luxuriance of the "cane," and the thousands of vines and parasites, comfortably vegetating in case, and void of care, depending on other more hard working subjects of that kingdom for their sustenance and support-these, and hundreds of other rural sights, formed a pleasing diorama to our wearied urban eyes, and we gazed and An Acr supplementary to an Act entitled an feasted on them through all the hundred miles of fields of corn and of cotton were in order, and presented an agreeable variety in the landscape. The log hute, also, and freedmen's colonies here and there observable, if not ornamental in themwe cannot say of the barked and "boxed" pine trees, or of the unsightly "stills," with hundreds of barrels of "rosin" and turpentine lying about loose. So likewise with the numerous saw-mills, situated along the line of road. These are all useful, and speak well for the enterprise and industrial activity of our people; but they mar the beauty and harmony of nature. However, as long as tar, pitch and turpentine bring good prices in Liverpool, and lumber is a good deal in demand, so long "virgin dip" will pay better than virgin landscapes, and saw-mills than sylvan sentiment.
The Northeastern Railroad is in excellent order, all the wayside, as well as the terminal depots have been rebuilt, and in superior style to what they were before the war. Numerous villages are springing up along this railroad, and Florence, its erminus and point of intersection, is growing with every month. If we were to judge of the amount of business done there by the number of stores, we should say that Florence was in the very zenith of prosperity. There are very many stores there, so many that we were unable to count them all. The whistle new before we were half through the the L. W. GARBLE, Esq., make bost of the targe and elegant Florence Hotel, keeps an excel-tent house, and though he entertains travellers, and in first-rate style, too, we would not like to inour his displeasure by saying he "takes them in." They boast a newspaper now in Florence, the Gazelle, which takes care of the interests of this rising city by day, relieved in its arduous duty at night by the gallant corps of firemen who made such a favorable impression among the fair of the Palmetto city in April last. Watched over by such sentinels (and having no mosquitoes), the good people of Florence can rest secure. But we must delay in the fair Italian city no louger; we are off again on our way to Darlington. This is our first visit since the great fire. Unlike our own City by the Sea, we find Darlington is not jursing her burnt district, but on the contrary making all the haste she can to cover the unsightly scar. The public square is once more surrounded with a number of new stores, larger and handsomer than those that were burned. Themis alone is still covered with sackcloth and ashes; whether or not emblematic of the present state of civil law we did not learn. The ruius of the Court House are almost the only vestige loft of the late fire. This speaks well for a small community like Darlington, at a time-like this, when business is dull, money scarce, and prospects gloomy. The goddess of justice holds temporary court in a private hall, improvised for the purpose.

Darlington has a flourishing newspaper-the Southerner-with a veteran son of Faustus-Mr. Brown-to keep her citizens informed of what transpires beyond her limits. We visited the office and found the typos engaged in their arduous vocation; the foreman "imposing" "thrilling incidents," "shocking murders," "the weather and the crops," "Hymeneal," and "Reconstruction," on an ex-tombstone, now doing service as an imposing stone.

The following list comprises the principal merchants of Darlington; some of whom have been identified with the village for many years: Messrs. CHARLES & Co., S. A. WOODS, M. A. HUGGINS, B. & J. EARLY, EASON & Co., PARKER & KELLY, D. SIL-BERSTEIN, H. HYMES, J. G. McCall & Co., J. WOOWARD, LAW & CHARLES, NORMENT & DARthe attempting to prolong the war by the decree of March 7th, creating a regency in case of his and a restaurant by Mr. Pearce. Since General SICKLES' order has gone into effect, however, which rung the knell to restaurants, the latter establishment, we believe, has been "annexed" to the former. This, however, may be mere rumor. Darlington being the centre of a large and wealthy district, as may be supposed, is suffering country this summer.

Business is dull; indeed there is a complete stagnation. There is no money in the country, and very properly little or no credit. "Pay as you go," and "don't spend your money before you get it," | Wesleyan Female College-one of his masterly are two wholesome lessons, which, it is to be hoped, may survive the bitter school of our present experience. tediluvian vehicles, drawn by animals, that appear but remotely descended from the genus equus, poor and bony, spavined and scrawny, most piteous looking objects. They encamp on the public square, and stay there for hours, waiting not very patiently, it must be confessed, but rather noisily, for their turn. They receive generally a peck of meal each for the week, and nothing else, sometimes a very small quantity of bacon. For this pittance they expend in time not unfrequently from two to three days, and in muscle of self and horse certainly more than is comper sated by the said peck of meal. We regret, more over, as a faithful chronicler of current events to be compelled to say, that sometimes the frolic of the day breaks up riotously, meal being "swopped" for whiskey, and some of the pensioners get noisy, and even bellicose. A humiliating and piteous spectacle truly. A gentleman told us that he accosted a number of these "sand-hill people" on their way to the Commissary, and remonstrated with them on the folly and improvidence of wasting two or three days every week in going after a peck of meal; told them that if they would take work, he would employ thirty of them, and give them as much meat and bread as they could eat, and wages in money besides. "We cannot leave our crap," was the only reply. "But you are leaving it, as it is, and wear out your animals, and all for nothing. Well, we cannot help it. We haint got nothing at home, and we cannot starve." There are strange scenes and sights witnessed among these poor eople as they come up for their rations. In order o avoid imposition as much as possible, the Comnissary requires applicants to come in proprie persona. Nothing is issued to proxies. Old and diseased negroes may be seen crawling up and coming many miles, who three years ago, "in slavy times," could not have walked a hundred yards. Some are brought here, lifted out of the wagon, and taken to the office, more dead than alive. One case we heard of, told us by an eyewitness, is that of an old and infirm negro, who held on to a chair, pushing the same before him, and every few minutes would sit down and rest himself on this chair. By this slow and primitive locomotion, he came from five to six miles.

These "sandhillers," that have so often furnished a theme to our radical detractors-the "poor whites"-have heretofore been at a disadvantage, in that they were not willing to work side by side with the slave, but now that this institution is abolished, their prejudices need not be thus wounded. The land owner would even prefer white labor, and, if insisted on, let the sandhillers work in squads to themselves, if they could be relied on to do it. In the course of time, we doubt not, these people will learn to work and become respectable. They are now going through the period of transition. The spirit very often is willing, but the flesh weak. Some, we learn, this year agreed to work for wages, and others rented land at some distance from what had been their homestead. They made a fair start. Dire necessity taught them order, civilization, work; but, alas, the tempter came in the shape of blackberries, and they lacked the power to resist. The kind year had showered her first fruits upon them; there were blackberries in the old fields and on the ditch banks; they now could "see their way clear." They laid by the plough and the crop, put away shovel and hoe, and all hands "took to the woods." Blackberries demoralized them. More anon.

Another Reconstruction Act. The following is the full text of the Bill agreed upon by the House Judiciary Committee, and offered by Mr. STEVENS on Monday

TRAVELLER.

1867, and the Act supplementary thereto, passed March 23, 1867. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Repre-sentatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That it is hereby declared to have been the true intent and meaning of the Acts of March 2 and March 28, 1867, to which this Act is a supplement, that governments then existing in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Texas and Arkansas, were illegal and void, and that thereafter said governments were to be con-tinued subject in all respects to the military commanders of the respective districts and to the authority of Congress only.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That said acts, to which this is a supplement, shall be construed to authorize the officer assigned to the command of any military district under said acts, whenever he shall deem it necessary to the due performance of his duties under said acts, to remove or suspend from office any municipal or State officer, or person exercising authority under or by virtue of any so-called State Government existing in his district, and to appoint another person instead of the officer or person so removed, if he shall deem proper so to do, and to authorize the officer assigned to the command of any military district under said acts, whenever he may deem it necessary as aforesaid, to prohibit, suspend or set aside any act or proceeding of any such State or municipal government, or any act or thing done under or by virtue of its authority; it being the intention of said act that during its continuance, said so-called State Governments of the Rebel States shall be allowed to continue only as subordinate to, and subject to the control of the officers assigned to the military districts aforesaid respectively, and to Congress; and all acts heretofore done by any such officer in accordance herewith shall be deemed

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the boards of registration of the several military districts, established by the acts to which this is additional, shall admit to registration only such persons as they deem entitled to be registered by the acts aforesaid. They shall not regard the taking of the oath prescribed in the act of March 23, 1867, conclusive evidence of the right of the person taking it to be registered, but prima facie only; and may receive such evidence under oath, relating thereto, as they may deem proper, either from the person applying to be registered or others, and either of the members of said boards are hereby authorized to administer oaths or affirmations, and examine witnesses touching the right of any person to be registered. Said boards of registration may strike from the list of voters the name of any one already mentioned who, in their judgment, improperly took the oath pre-scribed in the act, to which this is additional, or was not entitled by said acts to be registered, and shall not be bound or governed in their action by any epinion of any officer of the United States Government. Record evidence shall not be required by said boards to prove participation in the rebellion, but parole evidence of fact of such participation shall be deemed by said boards sufficient to effect the disfranchise ment provided for by the acts to which this is

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That no civil court of the United States, or of any State, shall have jurisdiction of any action or proceeding, civil or criminal; against any such District Commander, or any officer or person acting by his authority, for or on account of any act done by him in his official capacity under this act, or under the acts to which it is supplementary, to wit, the act named in the first section of this act, and the act of March 23, 1867, supplementary thereto. Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That no District Commander shall be relieved from the command assigned to him under the aforesaid and consented to his removal, or unless by sentence of court-martial he shall be cashiered or dismissed from the army, or unless he shall

If we remember rightly, this is some ten or welve days later than the general average in former times; and from all we have heard of the crop we should think this is the case generally. Cotton has, upon a general average, about three months—from about the 18th of June to about the 18th of September-to mature its fruit, so that if the crop is ten days behind time, but about nine-tenths of a crop may be reasonably calculated upon.

[Cheraw Advertiser. THE WEATHER. - For the last two weeks rain nas fallen almost daily, but not in such quantities as for a few weeks before. Crops of all kinds are more or less damaged : and we fear here will not be more than a half crop gathered in this section. Wheat has suffered mos severely; in some parts of the District we learn of whole fields, containing many acres, being destroyed after having been cut and shocked—the heavy rains flooding the fields, and the wheat lining the banks of the creeks for miles. Corn and cotton in the low lands have been almost entirely ruined; but, that on the uplands appears to be doing well. The fruit crop is a complete failure. Apples, peaches, melons, &c., being things that we can think of and know that we have had.

[Cheraw Advertiser. We regret to learn that the grist mill of the Rev. D. LeGette, was washed away on Monday last. This misfortune will doubtless be a so rious inconvenience to the citizens in the neigh forhood of the mill. We are informed that all of Mr. LeGette's corn was in the mill at the time, and was consequently lost. [Marion Star.

An armed guard of soldiers arrived here last Monday, for the purpose, we understand, of guarding the jail until after Friday next, the day appointed for the execution of Jeff Gee, who assassinated Darius Gandy. Everything that possibly could be, has been done, by civil and military authority, to save this unfortunate man from the awful doom that awaits im. We trust that his execution will be a terrible warning to cowardly assassins and all who are so base as to take the lives of their fellow-men in cold blood.

Since writing the above, the following dispatch has been handed to us: COLUMBIA, 9th July 1867.

To the Sheriff of Marion, S. C. You will postpone the execution of Jeff Gee until the arrival of instructions from Governor F. G. DEFONTAINE, Private Secretary.

Marion Star. CROPS .- The recent heavy rains inflicted the severest injury upon the crops in the neigh-borhood of Bishopville. In many instances we learn the cotton was entirely submerged and Act to provide for the more efficient govern-ment of the rebel States, passed March 2, form any correct idea of the average of this crop, but we think, from carefully comparing and aggregating all that we have seen and heard, that it must be comparatively short. In many places, the weed is very small and in the grass. The corn prospect, while being far better than that of last year, is yet not so promising as it was earlier in the season. [Sumter Watchman.

AT A YOUNG LADY RETURNING TO HER country home, after a sojourn of a few months in the city, was hardly recognized by her friends. In place o. coarse, rustic, flushed face, she had a soft ruby complexion of almost marble smoothness, and instead of w nty-three she really appeared but eighteen. Upon inuiry as to the cause of so great a change, she plainly told them that she used the CIRCASSIAN BALM, and considered it an invaluable acquistion to any lady's toilet. By its use any Lady or Gentlemen can improve their personal appearance an hundred fold. It is simple in its ombination, as Nature herself is simple yet unsurpass ed in its efficacy in drawing impurities from, also heal ing, cleansing and beautifying the skin and complexion By its directaction on the cuticle it draws from it all its mpurities, bindly healing the same, and leaving the surface as Nature intended it should be-clear, soft, smooth and beautiful.
